It's Time to Ask the Right Question

Politicians who support legal abortion know that the majority of Americans – even those who call themselves “pro-choice” are very uncomfortable with abortion itself. In order to appear reasonable to these voters, the core strategy of pro-choice politicians is to avoid being identified with the actual act of abortion.

In that effort, they have perfected the ability to look a national TV audience in the face and claim that they are not “pro-abortion” and that they “don’t like abortion” or “are deeply troubled by abortion.” They are lying, of course, which is proven by the fact that once in office they will fight even the most innocuous restrictions on abortion and vote to use tax dollars to pay for them.

Despite its dishonesty, this strategy has been so effective that it has even led to many pro-life voters feeling comfortable voting for pro-choice candidates. After all, they claim to be opposed to abortion! Meanwhile, we routinely elect politicians who say they are pro-life during the campaign and then stab us in the back once they are in office.

This situation exists because the pro-life movement has been asking politicians the wrong question. We need to recognize that a politician’s position on abortion means nothing. This battle has been going on for almost 50 years and if there is one thing we should have learned by now it is that every politician claiming to be pro-life, and every politician claiming to be pro-choice, is going to say that they are against abortion.

It is time for the pro-life movement to establish some new ground rules, and we can start by making it clear to every candidate running for office that we have no interest in hearing their position on abortion. We don’t care how they “feel” or how they “think” or what they “believe” about abortion.

We’re also not interested in any rhetoric about “reducing the need for abortion” or “lowering the rate of unwanted pregnancies” or “building a culture of life,” etcetera. The day when we could be bought off with that sort of mealy-mouthed gibberish should have ended years ago.

All we want is their answer to two simple questions. First, from the moment of fertilization, and in all circumstances, is the unborn child a living human being entitled to have his or her life protected by law just like every other living human being? If they answer yes, the second question is whether they will promise that every action they take in office, and every vote they cast, will reflect that position?

How they answer those two questions will tell us everything we need to know about any political candidate running for any political office.

Next, we need to make it clear that, from now on, we are going to be single issue voters. For too long, the pro-life movement has bought into this nonsense that having litmus tests is wrong. To understand that, imagine that a political candidate was honest, intelligent, experienced and had all the right answers to all the important issues of the day. But he had written an article saying that women should have never been given the right to vote. You can bet that would be a litmus test. Or if some candidate was found to be a member of the Ku Klux Klan, that too would be a litmus test.

The list goes on and on and, in fact, there are many legitimate reasons for litmus tests and anyone who claims not to have any is either lying or is devoid of personal convictions. The interesting thing is, the only group in contemporary America that is routinely told that they should not have litmus tests, and that it is not reasonable to be single-issue voters, are those defending the unborn.

The good news is, we don't have to go along with this anymore. Our political message should be that candidates who are wrong on the slaughter of helpless children cannot be right enough on every other issue to make up for it. Legalized abortion is the wholesale execution of helpless children and those who support its legality are not morally qualified to hold any political office.

Why Revive the Newsletter?

In 1999, we began producing LifeTalk – the first television talk show dedicated exclusively to the pro-life issue. It was extremely successful for many years, but when the Internet and social media came along our DVD subscriptions began to plummet and we had to accept that LifeTalk had run its course.

To pull the plug on LifeTalk was emotionally devastating for us. We loved producing it and it had served the pro-life movement well for a long time.

But the world has changed and it was time to move on. People today have shorter attention spans and less free time than in the past and, whether we like it or not, the art of communication now revolves around short simplistic messages delivered through electronic media.

And this is especially important with the younger demographic groups that the pro-life movement so desperately needs to impact.

So we began to ratchet up our footprint on the Internet, and we are now reaching far more people with social media than we ever did with LifeTalk. The problem is, the operators of these social media platforms are, with virtually no exceptions, rabid supporters of legal abortion and that is producing widespread censorship of the pro-life message. There are even some indications that the abortion lobby may be assisting these social media platforms in keeping the pro-life message off the Internet.

The pro-life movement has made too much progress to now toss the fate of the unborn into this corrupt environment. Yes, we need to fight in that system with all the resolve we can, but we must also prepare for the possibility that, one day soon, the pro-life message could be banned from social media. In fact, every day we see more and more evidence that the foundation for this is already being laid.

To counter this, we had better put an alternative in place that these tech giants can't control. The stakes are too high for us to risk being caught off guard or without options and that is why we are reintroducing our newsletter.

However, you can rest assured that Life Dynamics will never cede any ground to the abortion lobby on social media and that we will continue to face them down on any battlefield where we find them. Our reputation has always been that we are aggressive, uncompromising and unapologetic in defense of the unborn and that will not change regardless of the environment we are called to fight in.

We would value your input regarding the content and style of this newsletter so please let us know what you think. Also, tell us whether you would like to continue receiving it. It's FREE!

RoeBots

RoeBots – those who blindly defend Roe v. Wade – say that women cannot be free unless they have the right to control their reproductive lives.

This is standard pro-abortion double-talk. In reality, when a woman is pregnant reproduction has already occurred. The only thing elective abortion can do is kill the new human being that has been produced.

Beyond that, only a demented mind could see the right to kill one's baby as a symbol of freedom. As pro-life feminist, Frederica Mathewes-Green, once said, a woman aborting her child is like an animal gnawing off its own leg to get out of a trap. Abortion, she said, is not a sign that women are free but a sign that they are desperate. Another feminist author warned women that they would never be able to achieve equality with men by climbing over the dead bodies of their children.

It should also be pointed out that the early pioneers of the American women's movement were adamantly opposed to the legalization of abortion. Even suffragist publications such as Woodhull's and Clafin's Weekly, had strong editorial policies against the legalization of abortion and openly condemned those who did them.

What these people knew is that abortion is patronizing and paternalistic and that a woman's willingness to submit to it doesn't free her, it devalues her. They also understood that legalized abortion is just a safety net for sexually predatory and sexually irresponsible males. It allows these kinds of men to sexually exploit women and then kill their way out of responsibility – and that is exactly what we see happening today. Meanwhile, the abortion lobby continues to market this perverted concept that having the legal right to murder their babies is the cornerstone of women's equality.

It is interesting to note that over the front gate of Nazi concentration camps was a sign that stated, "Arbeit macht frei." Translated into English it means, "Work Makes You Free." Of course, this was a cruel and cynical lie, but it was no bigger a lie than the abortion industry sales pitch, "Abortion Makes You Free."

MAIL THEFT UPDATE In recent letters we made you aware that, for some time, donations to Life Dynamics had plummeted with no obvious explanation. Then we discovered that our mail was being stolen. An investigation was launched and, within a short time, the Dallas police had caught two suspects. It turned out to be a husband and wife team who live near us, had some of our mail in their car, and have both served time for mail theft.

Unfortunately, most of the estimated 150,000 to 250,000 dollars they cost us is gone forever. This has severely impacted our pro-life efforts and even threatened our very survival.

We have now put a system in place to make sure this can't happen again, but it is going to take a while for us to fully recover. To reach that point, we are going to need a lot of financial support from the Life Dynamics family, so please keep us in mind. Anything you can do would be greatly appreciated.

A: Bigfoot might actually exist.

So Says SARAH

Primetime Propoganda

There is a natural connection between politics and culture and no one knows this better than the abortion lobby. They understand that the perception, and the stigma, of abortion affects not just its legality, but everything down to who is willing to walk through an abortion clinic's front door. That is why the pro-choice side has set out to normalize abortion by using carefully crafted storylines on popular television shows.

According to the Abortion Onscreen Report: 2019 by the University of California, San Francisco, in 2019 there were "...forty-three abortion discussions and disclosures on television, more than we've ever observed in a single year."

Abortion storylines have been featured in popular shows such as Friday Night Lights, Crazy Ex-Girlfriend, Jane The Virgin, Bull, Grey's Anatomy, and Scandal. Original series produced by the streaming services Netflix and Hulu both have shows which feature positive abortion storylines and portrayals. And HBO will soon be releasing a noriginal film called UnPregnant. It's a comedy about a teenager who finds out she is pregnant and wants to dodge her state's parental notification law. So she sets out on a road trip with her misfit best friend to an abortion clinic over 900 miles away.

Contrary to what writers and show creators may say, television shows positively portraying abortion are not about creating powerful and diverse storylines. They're about improving the American public's perception of abortion by placing it in settings that are less charged and confrontational.

In an article for MTV news about abortion's portrayal on television, Stephanie Herold, a researcher for the above mentioned Abortion Onscreen Report told MTV news, "Studying TV and culture in particular is really important because of how culture representations affect real people's attitudes about abortion...Pop culture, particularly TV, has power that legislators don't have to meet people where they are in their homes and tell all these compassionate, tender stories about abortion, about the people who have abortions, about abortion providers — and also showcase how to support someone who's had an abortion."

And a cursory scan of television shows spewing pro-choice rhetoric and positive abortion portrayals reveals that the abortion industry's target is teens.

The abortion lobby knows just how important these portrayals are. It's one of the reasons that Planned Parenthood has their Media Excellence Awards, that recognizes "...exceptional contributions by the media and arts and entertainment industries that enhance the public's understanding of reproductive rights and sexual health issues, including abortion..." In fact, ABC received this award in 2011 for its abortion storyline on Friday Night Lights. And in 2017, Planned Parenthood awarded Grey's Anatomy & Scandal Creator/Writer, Shonda Rhimes, the Champion of Change Award for "...revolutionizing the way women and issues of reproductive health — including safe, legal abortion — are portrayed on television."

For far too long, the conservative side has ignored the impact that culture plays on politics, and what is currently playing out in our streets is proof of what happens as a result. The abortion lobby knows that the future of legalized abortion is fragile — it's time for us to catch up.

According To SHEILA

A Haunting Shadow that Lingers Over Big Abortion

For an industry that profits from killing as many babies as possible, any other immoral attitude or actions that they have should come as no surprise to anyone. Yet, the American public, politicians, and mainstream media have tried to ignore a dark shadow that's hanging over the abortion industry. Is the shadow finally coming back to haunt them?

Several years ago, Life Dynamics released a ground-breaking documentary that exposed and proved that the motivation behind the legalization of abortion in America was black genocide. While the film "Maafa 21" has had a tremendous impact and has been seen by over a million people, abortion advocates and the mainstream media like to portray the truth as some wild conspiracy theory or a thing of the past, despite the fact that their plan is still being carried out today.

But the recent revelations of wide-spread racism and discrimination inside the abortion industry, made by Planned Parenthood and other abortion industry employees, is clearly vindicating our message.

Since the Black Lives Matter movement has been sweeping across the nation, along with the violence and upheaval that has followed it, the left has associated everything with a "race war" in the guise of "justice." With this hyper-focus currently being put on race, the abortion industry hasn't been immune to scrutiny either. From founder Margaret Sanger's name being removed from a Planned Parenthood in New York to the recent allegations from employees, Life Dynamics is going to take full advantage of this situation. We must strike while the iron is hot! Which is why we have devised an aggressive campaign to push this issue further into the light, and to encourage more past or present employees to come forward.

In the past, Life Dynamics has called for whistleblowers to come forward if they have first-hand experience with the abortion industry. We are doing the same thing here so the world will see what is truly going on.

We are now ratcheting up calls for whistleblowers to come forward. We are doing this with both paid ads and posts on social media, and we are directly targeting the pages and accounts of pro-abortion organizations. Also, by the time you receive this newsletter, we will have reached out to employees of every abortion clinic and Planned Parenthood facility in America urging them to contact us about any workplace racism they may have witnessed.

Our campaign doesn't end there. We are also encouraging people to sign a petition demanding that the government IMMEDIATELY defund these organizations and launch a federal investigation into their actions related to racism and hate crimes.

*To sign the petition, visit:
lifedynamics.com/defundracism*

While the world tries to ignore the abortion holocaust, and the hateful and racist role that the abortion industry plays in a widespread eugenics plan, we must continue to push the truth. Right now, the world seems like it is upside down and standing up for what's right can seem lonely at times, but we must push on. Push on for the thousands of babies who are murdered on a daily basis and push on for justice and truth!

Heretics, Liars, Holocaust Deniers

by Mark Crutcher

President, Life Dynamics Incorporated

As incredible as it may seem, there are actually people running loose in society who contend that the Nazi Holocaust never happened. They can see the videos, they can hear directly from the survivors and they can even visit the death camps that still remain in parts of Europe. Yet they choose to be living testaments to the fact that the human brain is the only organism in nature that has this bizarre ability to intentionally deceive itself.

The recent Democrat National Convention was an organized gathering of holocaust deniers. Except the holocaust they are denying is the one they are carrying out. It is the abortion holocaust and it has killed far more people than the Nazis ever dreamed of killing.

At this convention, there was also a lot of chirping about “values” and “morality” because they know this conveys an image that rakes in votes from middle America. But the truth is, the once-proud Democrat Party has devolved into a freak show of Communists, baby killers, and sexual deviants. To put it bluntly, contemporary Democrats wouldn’t recognize a moral value if it bit them on the butt.

This Conclave of the Godless featured a large contingent of Democrats who masquerade as Christians while simultaneously pledging their undying devotion to legalized abortion.

These people are heretics. When “choice” means that it should be legal to slaughter innocent and helpless unborn children, there can be no such thing as a “pro-choice Christian.” Remember, two basic tenets of Christian doctrine are that (a) God is the author of life and (b) He doesn’t make mistakes. Obviously, if those two things are true, the unavoidable conclusion is that whenever there’s a new life in the womb, God is The One who created it and it is, therefore, His will that it be there.

On the other hand, the pro-choice position is that life is not a right inherited from God but is, instead, a privilege bestowed by human beings who can withhold it if they choose to do so. This mindset is grounded in the assumption that God is indifferent about whether the new lives He creates are snuffed out in their mother’s wombs.

Of course, people can choose to believe either of these two philosophies, but to suggest that they can believe both at the same time is logically and theologically absurd. By deductive reasoning, it is simply not possible to reconcile legitimate Christian beliefs with support for legalized abortion.

But despite this, the fantasy that pro-choice Christians really do exist seemed to be universally embraced at the Democrat National Convention. As I watched this – and all their other Marxist claptrap – unfold, it dawned on me that somewhere along the way the Democrat Party must have changed its mascot from the donkey to the unicorn!

Now, I want to say something to those members of the pro-choice community who may be reading this and who have convinced themselves that they can be an advocate for legal abortion and a Christian at the same time.

Like all of us, you will one day have to face God’s judgement. It could be tomorrow or it could be years from now, but at some point that moment is inevitable. In the light of that reality, you would be wise to think about what it is going to be like to suddenly find yourself standing face to face with The One who created and loved every child that you helped to murder.
